Executive Functioning Skill of the Month Self Control

Self-control is a student's ability to stop and think before acting. It helps students manage their emotions, control impulses, and make good choices during learning and social situations. A student with strong self-control can wait their turn, follow classroom rules, stay calm when frustrated, and keep working even when a task feels challenging. Developing self-control supports success in school because it helps students stay focused, complete their work, and interact positively with teachers and peers. With practice and support, students can strengthen self-control and make thoughtful decisions that help them reach their goals.
